You've been tasked to solve the mysterious case of the murder of EggsBenedict, the grumpy neighbor of many on Elm St in Northampton, MA. Just as the police arrived at the crime scene, the murderer escaped, zigzagging his way out of Western Massachusetts and onto Logan International Airport, from where you see him easily go through security and disappear into the loud crowd. You want to follow him, however, you get asked by the TSA officer to step to the side as you seem to be carrying some suspicious item: one of those bottle openers from the night before. While you clear things up with the TSA, you see the murderer one last time. He boards flight UA420. Or is it 429? As you try to decide which one of the two to take, you realize one is going to Tirana, Albania, and the other one is headed to Beijing, China.
